PREFACE,

WE know that this Directory will meet a demand that has existed for some considerable time. We have, therefore, exercised every care in its compilation, for, in addition to the ordinary instance of mortality and migration, we have had to deal with mass migration to new housing schemes that have been erected in every district covered by this publication. We would make it clear, therefore, that we do not hold ourselves responsible for any errors that may appear here, and we would ask the users to advise us of any changes that may take place, so that we will avoid the same error in the next edition.

In the compilation of the ordinary alphabetical list of names, it should be noted that we have inserted the particulars relating to people who live in the district permanently. Those persons who are tenants of property, but who do not permanently reside at that address are not included in this list. Neither do we include tenants of ground used for camping purposes. If any user of this Directory should require a list of these persons, we will be pleased to supply it on request. It should also be noted that every group is kept, so far as possible, within its own burgh or parish. In some cases (as in Glengarnock, which is at the boundary of Beith, Dalry, and Kilbirnie) the postal address does not coincide with that of the parish, so we have made separate lists where this is required.

FOREWORD

BY

ANDREW TAYLOR, Organising Secretary, Ayrshire Development Council.

THE Directory should prove to be of great assistance as a book of reference covering the major portion of the Ayrshire district of Cunningham, which offers such a large contribution to the attractions of Ayrshire, both from an industrial and tourist viewpoint.

The portion of the County, enclosed by a line drawn from Largs to Beith and thence to Irvine, is representative of Ayrshire at its best—great areas of agricultural production, scenery of unspoilt charm and quiet beauty, a wonderful coast-line fringed by golden sands and with unrivalled outlook seawards, yet, with it all, belts of industry and great centres of activity, contributing their quota to the prosperity of the County as a whole.

The fine harbour of Ardrossan is one of the principal assets of the County with its facilities for export and import activities in the Eglinton Dock and Tidal Basin, cargo cranes, coaling hoists and dry dock, its regular passenger and cargo sailings to Scotland, England and Ireland. Other industrial interests of the town are the Shipyard, Ironfoundries, Hosiery and Oilskin manufacture, Metallic Factory, Oil Refining, etc. Ardrossan has also many attractions for visitors, including fine stretches of sand on North and South beaches, Golf, Tennis, Bowling and Fishing, while the record for sunshine is often the highest in Scotland.

The neighbouring town of Saltcoats is an attractive seaside resort with fine beach, agreeable climate, and pure air. The beach and esplanades are superb, and there is a fine entertainments Pavilion, Salt pans Bathing Pond with water chute, diving stages, spring boards, etc., every choice of boating, rowing, Golf, Bowling, and Tennis.

At Stevenston are the large Explosives and Chemical Works with their manifold activities, also Foundries, Quarries and Firebrick manufacture. Kilwinning has Spinning Works, Coal Mining, Ironfounding, Crane Works, Fencing Manufacture, &c.

Irvine, in addition to its fine Harbour, has a dockyard, Iron and Brass Founding, Chemical Works, Soap Works, Hosiery manufacture, Coal Mining, Engineering, and Saw Mills. Here John Galt, the Ayrshire novelist, was born, and many valuable Burns relics are to be found at the Irvine Burns Club. An interesting annual event is the crowning of the Marymass Queen. The beach is one of the finest stretches of sand in the West of Scotland. Close to the town is Eglinton Castle, the fine seat of the Earl of Eglinton.

The name Beith is of Celtic origin, signifying Birch, and the staple industry in earlier days was chair-making, mostly of birch wood. Now seven factories employ hundreds of workmen, and are kept busy turning out artistic creations in Cabinets, Chairs, Tables, Sideboards, Bedroom and other Furniture, special work such as War Memorials, Organ Casings, Church Furniture, &c., "Beith Quality" being the standard of high-class material, manufacture and finish.

A few miles off are the famous Glengarnock Steel Works, which have always been the centre of Steel manufacture in the County, and the new Rolling Mill is fully equipped for the production of all kinds of Rails, Fishplates, Shipbuilding and Structural Sections. Within recent years new plant has been installed for the production of Steel Sleepers for Railways, and Steel Arches for Collieries. The fabrication of the Rolled Sections into Steel Structures is carried out within the works. The main productions are Steel-framed Buildings, both for Home and Abroad, and more recently there has been added the all-welded structure, instead of the older method of riveting.

At Dalry are Hosiery, Tweed and Blanket manufacture, also Dyeing and Spinning, while Kilbirnie is the centre for Threadmaking, other industries being those of Net, Rope and Rubber manufacture

West Kilbride is a favourite inland summer resort with the suburb of Seamill on the coast, also Portencross and Ardneil with its attractive beach. The older portion of the village has a picturesque old-worldness, but the newer section has houses and shops of the most modern description. The air is bracing, and the climate is fine. A good 18-Hole Golf Course is on the shore between Portencross and Seamill, with an excellent club house. Bowling Greens, Tennis, Entertainment Pavilion, and other attractions are offered. Among places of interest are Law Castle, Crosbie Castle, Portencross Castle, Hunterston Castle, and Southannan House.

Fairlie is growing in popularity as a sea resort, and good accommodation of all kinds is available. An interesting industry is that of Yacht Building, and at the world-famous yard have been built many of the most successful challengers for the Seawanhaka, Cumberland, Northcote, and other international Cups.

Largs is one of the most popular and attractive summer resorts in the West of Scotland, and draws an increasing number of tourists from all parts. The climate is equable yet bracing. Great variety of steamer sailings to Ayr, Ailsa Craig, Arran, Bute, Arrochar, Millport, &c., are available; also 18-Hole and 9-Hole Golf Courses, Putting Greens, Tennis Courts, Bowling Greens, Sailing and Speed Motor Boats, and great variety of indoor entertainments. The Royal Largs Yacht Club holds two regattas, one at Clyde Fortnight and one in August. Kelburn Castle is the seat of the Earl of Glasgow, and is a fine specimen of a Scottish baronial residence. Knock Castle is now a picturesque ruin.

Enough has been said in the foregoing notes to indicate generally the wide variety of interests in this district of Ayrshire. It is to be hoped that the Directory will be found of great value to commercial and professional people, also to visitors and to those interested in other ways

ARDROSSAN.

ARDROSSAN, though an ancient parish, is quite a modern town. It had its origin in the docks that were built by the Earl of Eglinton in the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The growth of the town, thereafter, was slow, but certain. As the dock builder's foresight was justified, so did the town grow around the docks, which, in their turn, had to be enlarged, as the shipping industry realised that they were located in an ideal position to serve the whole of Scotland.

Having sufficient water at low tide to serve any ordinary merchant vessel, no long channels to navigate, and nearly entire immunity from fog, the position is eminently suited to give quick loading and discharging facilities to vessels. Added to this is equipment of modern design, and radiating services by road, rail, and coastal shipping, all of which go to make it the ideal port for shipowners who must keep their vessels in motion if they would make them pay reasonable dividends.

There are, also, facilities provided by the Dockyard Company to give quick and efficient overhauls, and supply all of the myriad care and maintenance services that are needed by all ships.

The town has been fortunate in being planned along modern lines, and is noted for its broad straight streets and cleanly condition.

It is one of the really progressive small burghs of Ayrshire, and has a relatively large number of public utility services.

At the present time, different organisations are making every effort to attract other industries to the town, and it may become one of the busiest towns in Scotland within the next decade.

BEITH.

BEITH is a town with many historical associations, being among the places recorded as forming part of the Kingdom of Strathclyde. It probably came into being on account of its commanding view of the countryside, which would be a matter of importance during the days of internecine strife.

From its earliest days it has been known as a furniture-making district. This industry has grown with the times, so that, at the present time, Beith has a reputation for cabinet work that has gone far beyond Ayrshire.

Apart from that, and a little leather work, it is mostly the centre for a wide agricultural district that sends its produce to the markets of Glasgow, Kilmarnock, and Ayr.

Its own market has been discontinued for many years, but it is commemorated by St. Inan's Day, the 30th August.

DALRY (Ayrshire).

LIKE the parish of the same name in New Galloway, DALRY must have been, at one time, a Gaelic-speaking district. In Gaelic the name means "the King's Valley."

As it is presently constituted, the district (or, at least, the town) is modern, coming into general prominence with the demand for ironstone in the early part of last century, when the Blair and Glengarnock Ironworks were started. To-day it is known chiefly as a woollen manufacturing centre, and it is kept busy producing yarns and tweeds.

Though a portion of Glengarnock is within the boundaries of Dalry Parish, it is served by a separate railway station and post office. The Glengarnock station serves a portion of Kilbirnie Parish (though it is situated in Dalry Parish), while the Glengarnock Post Office is within the Kilbirnie Parish. Because of this, that part of the Dalry Parish served by Glengarnock Post Office is made a separate alphabetical list at the end of this section.

In addition to Glengarnock, the villages of Barkip, Burnside, Den and Drakemyre are within Dalry Parish.

The town of Dalry, being centrally situated (about 22 miles from Glasgow, 15 miles from Paisley, 11 miles from Kilmarnock, 9 miles from Ardrossan, 7 miles from Irvine, and 17 miles from Ayr) has become the point from which a great many road services radiate.

IRVINE.

IRVINE is a town with many historical associations. It was created a Royal Burgh by Alexander II., and had at one time, jurisdiction over the whole Cunningham district of Ayrshire.

It was here that the Buchanites were formed, and were, subsequently, expelled by the magistrates. It is the birth-place of James Montgomery, the Christian poet; John Galt, author of "Annals of the Parish"; Henry Eckford, founder of the U.S.A. Navy; and Daniel MacMillan, founder of MacMillan's Publishing House. It is also the original home of the Montgomeries, the Earls of Eglinton and Winton.

Among its more than locally known festivals are the Marymass Races, which are organised yearly by the Carter's Society, and run on Irvine Moor, where part of the Territorial Army camp in the Summer.

It has been known for many centuries as a town of artificers, and it is known to-day for glass bottle making, chemical manufacture, and forging. The port is extensively used for coastwise shipping: importing timber, iron, and limestone, and exporting coal, bricks, and explosives.

KILBIRNIE.

KILBIRNIE is like its neighbour, Dalry, in being a place of some age, that only became known with the advent of the industrial era.

Its industries include net-making, linen thread manufacture, steel-making, and steel construction work.

As in the case of Dalry, it includes a portion of the Glengarnock area within the parish, and this is made a separate alphabetical list at the end of this section.

For local government purposes it is the centre for dealing with all matters pertaining to Dalry, Beith, and Kilbirnie parishes, the administrative offices being located in a range of buildings which adjoin the Walker Hall, in Main Street.

It should be noted that, on account of the paucity of telephones in the district, the telephone exchange is Beith.

KILWINNING BURGH.

KILWINNING Parish and Burgh are of world-wide repute, due, without doubt, to their Masonic connection.

The district takes its name from St. Winning, an Irish missionary, who founded a church here in the eighth century. His successors, in the twelfth century, obtained the services of some of those architects who travelled all over Europe disseminating the principles of Gothic architecture. This fraternity was favoured with peculiar privileges from the Popes of Rome, and called themselves Freemasons.

In coming to Kilwinning, and Scotland, to build the Abbey, they were compelled by circumstance to take some of the natives into their fellowship, and make them partakers of their privileges and secrets. The earliest records now extant in the Kilwinning Lodge are dated 1642.

Kilwinning was also noted for its Festival of the Popinjay (referred to by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality"), which was only discontinued recently.

After the Reformation, Kilwinning lost its prestige among the parishes of Scotland, and was known practically as a weaving village till the building of the Ironworks, about 1850, when a period of intense industrial activity was inaugurated that embraced a large surrounding district.

When work stopped at the Ironworks, in 1920, Kilwinning again lapsed into a semi-pastoral community, dependent mainly on agriculture. There is still one engineering works, a foundry, a spinning mill, and a fireclay brick works, that provide an outlet for some labour. The bulk of the population who were employed in the Ironworks and mines have had, however, to look outwith the town and parish for employment, till the time again returns when it will take its place among the busy industrial districts of the country. There is no doubt that such a time will return, as the district is rich in deposits of sandstone, ironstone, limestone, and coal.

(including Fairlie and Skelmorlie).

LARGS is a place of considerable age, but, as it is seen to-day, it is entirely a modern residential town. The bulk of the housing accommodation is given over to visitors in the summer-time, and the community (through its Council) have laid themselves out to make the place as attractive as possible to the visitor.

In this they have been very successful, so that, to-day, it is one of the really busy holiday resorts of the Clyde. All credit is due the community for doing this without slavishly copying the methods in use at other resorts.

The area immediately outwith the burgh, but within the parish (which includes the most of Fairlie and all of Skelmorlie), contains vantage points from which can be viewed some of the finest scenery in the world. This, doubtless, is one of the reasons for the popularity of the district.

The activity of the Council of the burgh is shown by the number of public utility services that are operated for the communal good, and the benefit of the holiday-maker.

FAIRLIE.

FAIRLIE is about nine-tenths within the Parish of Largs, and the remainder in the Parish of West Kilbride.

Though known generally as a quiet holiday resort, it has other claims to notice, being a fairly busy fishing port and fish-curing district in the season. It is also well known as a yacht-building district.

SKELMORLIE.

SKELMORLIE is the most northerly point in Ayrshire, and is separated from Renfrewshire by the Kelly Burn, which goes into the sea at a point a few yards South of Wemyss Bay Station.

It is a Quoad Sacra Parish within the Parish of Largs, and is built, mostly, on a hill that commands a fine panoramic view of the Clyde. It is entirely a residential district given over to fairly large houses occupied by commercial and professional people from Greenock, Paisley, and Glasgow.

SKELMORLIE.

SALTCOATS.

SALTCOATS is a residential town that caters very largely for summer visitors. It is situated within a sandy and sheltered bay, and is therefore an ideal situation for children. Located between the two industrial towns of Ardrossan and Stevenston, it is patronised as a shopping centre for these places, as it caters for a much larger population than exists within its own boundaries, and it also offers a very large variety of entertainments in winter and in summer. These entertainments undoubtedly bring a big number of people into the town, and the shopping community benefit indirectly thereby.

In recent years, there has been an increase in the number of people who have removed from Glasgow and its environs, and reside here permanently, travelling by train, or car, to business daily. There is every indication that this number will increase as accommodation is provided.

Gas is supplied by a private company at reasonable rates. Electricity supplies are available from the Ayrshire Electricity Board sub-station at Ardrossan. Water comes from the Irvine and District Water Board Reservoirs, which are of large capacity.

At one time, Saltcoats was a considerable fishing port, but it has fallen from the position it held. This is doubtless due to the fact that the pier is situated at a distance from the railway. To-day there is very little fishing, and a glance at the Directory will show very few fishermen. Some salmon are netted in the bay in the season.

STEVENSTON.

STEVENSTON is an industrial town that received its name from Stephen Loccard, or Lockhart, whose parent obtained a grant of the lands from Richard de Morville, Lord of Cunningham, Constable of Scotland, in 1170. In its early days it was famous for the production of Jew's harps. Subsequently it became known as an iron and coal mining district, and is reputed to be among the first districts (in 1719) to use steam engines for pumping purposes.

To-day there is very little coal mining and no iron or steel works. There is, however, some foundries, and the now world-wide known Nobel's Explosive Works, which provide employment for several thousand.

Stevenston has never acquired the status of a police burgh, being a landward area under county council control. It has a beach that is second to none in Britain for bathing purposes, yet no attempt has been made to adapt it to modern requirements, either for visitors or residents. It is felt, locally, that no great improvement will take place until it is under the control of people resident in the town, so an attempt is being made to fuse its interests with those of the adjoining town of Saltcoats.

WEST KILBRIDE.

THE village of West Kilbride is situated at a point about a mile inland from the district of Seamill.

Like most North Ayrshire towns and villages, it was at one time a weaving district. To-day it is entirely residential, and caters, through the ordinary house, the boarding-house, hotel, hydropathic, or convalescent home, for visitors. Its attraction is found mainly in its rural quietness.

The Parish extends from Seamill along the coast to a point within the village of Fairlie. For the purposes of this Directory we have included the residents of Fairlie in the Largs section, as the postal address is of first importance, and for the reason that nine-tenths of Fairlie is Largs Parish.
